

Raborn Takes Oath as CIA's New Director

By PAUL HEALY

Washington, April 28 (News Bureau) — President Johnson presided over the swearing in today of retired Vice Adm. William F. Raborn as the new director of the Central Intelligence Agency after awarding the National Security Medal to his predecessor, John A. McCone.

At a ceremony in the White House Cabinet Room, Raborn promised to do all he could to "live up to the confidence" the President placed in him.

Also sworn in was Richard M. Helms, new CIA deputy director. Helms, a former Washington newsman, has been deputy plans director of the agency.

At another White House ceremony today Mrs. Johnson welcomed 20 so-called beautification ambassadors who have exemplified in their communities the national beautification campaign which the First Lady is pushing.
